Dennis Flinn and his wife came out to the house this evening. He has already proved [redacted] useful as our Liaison Officer with USAREUR. He is a former FBI man and knew many of my friends in that organization. He especially admired, as I did, Percy E. Foxworth, who was killed in a mysterious accident during the war while flying from Brazil to Africa. He was a brilliant fellow and Donovan had hoped and expected and other NATO nations will take care of them.

I had a shot this afternoon in the Infirmary for Asian flu.

Mary Cutler came to see me. She has been assigned to the Political Section here. I learned, to my regret, that all the Cutler brothers are now dead with the exception of Bobby and Roger. Bobby is back again in Washington, running the National Security Council, and Roger has retired to South Carolina. It was a remarkable family.

The Paraguayan Ambassador, Morinigo, came to call. The affairs of his country seem, even to him, to be rather remote from the German scene and political conditions here.

Our trains went through to and from Berlin last night as usual. I talked to General Maddox, Hodes' deputy commander, who will be in Berlin Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, and said I would meet him there on Friday. We spent a good deal of time during the day attempting to explore further facts regarding transportation on our military trains.

The new Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Gomez-Pinzon, called on me this afternoon. In civil life he is an engineer, and this is his first diplomatic appointment. His house and office are in Cologne.

I went to see Kit Steel this afternoon and talked about Berlin train matters with him. He is going up there tomorrow and I shall go on Friday. Meanwhile, our people are gathering all the information they can about the nature of shipments on military trains.

Leon Goldenberg, head of the German Desk in ICA, Washington, had a long talk with me about his difficulties with Eleanor Dulles regarding the expenditure of ICA funds in Berlin. I explained my own views namely, that, in view of the improved situation there and the general prosperity in Western Germany, there should be a curtailment of the aid thus far accorded on an almost super-generous scale by various U. S. agencies. We also went over her plans for a supermarket project and for housing to be built through the use of Finnmarks to be applied against the purchase of wooden pre-fabs in Finland. The resulting cost would be about 25% higher than if they were constructed of brick or stone in Berlin.

Mr. Getzin and three Atomic Energy Commission officials, Messrs. David, Staebler and Bishop, interested in nuclear energy for peaceful purposes, spent a half hour with me.

I left about 7:30 with Rebecca Wellington for Wahn airport where the Air Force had kindly sent a plush C-54 to take me to Berlin. We went immediately to the office, and there met with Generals Maddox and Hamlett, Col. Pugh, Gufler, Hillenbrand, Tom Nelson, Walter Radius and, for a time, Eleanor Dulles, on the military train matter.

I got back just in time for dinner, bringing most of the conference members with me on the plane. Mr. and Mrs. William Balderston (Chairman of the Board of Directors of Philco International Corporation), Harvey Williams and his wife (President of Philco International), Dr. and Mrs. Eberhard Jung (a member of German advisory committee to the European Coal and Steel Community) and Dr. and Mr. Kurt Kleinschmidt (Director of Westdeutsche Kreditbank fur Baufinanzierung, Cologne), came to dinner with us. Mrs. Kleinschmidt is from Northern Germany and [redacted] pretty. We had a long and gay evening.
